五、閱讀測驗 (加分題，每題 3 分，共 6 分)

TED Talks are easy to understand and remember because speakers are allowed to talk for no more than eighteen minutes. The eighteen-minute rule works well because the average human brain gets tired pretty easily. Although a typical adult human brain weighs only about 1.5 kilograms, it uses up a huge amount of energy when it receives and processes new information. In addition, listening and paying attention to someone's talk for a long time can be very tiring.

You might think that eighteen minutes isn't enough for presenting an important idea, but many speakers have managed to achieve a lot within this limited amount of time. During the 1960s, Dr. Martin Luther King shared his dream of an equal society in just seventeen minutes. That speech is still considered one of the best in modern history. Before that, former US President John F. Kennedy made a fifteen-minute speech that inspired his country to reach for the moon. If eighteen minutes or less is enough for such leaders to inspire a nation, then it's enough time for anyone to present his or her idea.

- () 49. Which of the following would make the best title for this passage?
- (A) TED Talks: Short but Powerful
(B) Tips for Giving Great TED Talks
(C) Amazing Stories about TED Talks
(D) Incredible Things Our Brains Can Do
- () 50. What can we learn from the second paragraph?
- (A) The author doesn't believe that TED Talks can have a positive impact.
(B) It is almost impossible to present an important idea within 18 minutes.
(C) Dr. Martin Luther King's speech is viewed as one of the best in ancient history.
(D) Through his speech, John F. Kennedy encouraged his countrymen to travel to the moon.
